Print cloths sold at 4.35 cents a yard in 1848 when the Free-trade Tariff began to get in its work. In twelve years the price had risen to 5.44 cents a yard. But since then Protection brought print cloths down to 3.95 cents a yard, their average price in 1891.

LIGHT ON THE SILVER QUESTION.

Commercial Gazette.—The statement published showing Senator Carlisle's practical observation on the silver question is of interest, inasmuch as it throws a great deal of light on this subject. It appears that under the Bland Act and the so-called Sherman Purchase Act there have been coined nearly five hundred millions of standard silver dollars. Of these not less than one hundred millions are in actual circulation, and the remainder are deposited in the United States Treasury. In addition, there is a large amount of bullion purchased by the United States Government also on deposit. It is found that the net loss on bullion purchases is equal to ten million dollars; that is to say, if the Government should sell at the present market price the accumulated bullion and standard silver dollars the loss would be, in round numbers, ten million dollars.

It appears that the silver circulation issued on the silver bullion and silver dollars has been redeemed by the Government in gold. That is the present policy. Hence it is that the gold supply in the Treasury has been depleted until, now, the reserve is nine millions below the standard. If the Government had exercised its discretion to redeem in coin the silver certificates, namely, in gold or silver, the gold reserve would, of course, have been maintained, but for prudential reasons it decided to preserve the parity of gold and silver by redeeming certificates in gold.

In case Congress should decide to stop the purchase of silver bullion, and also the coinage of standard dollars on the basis of sixteen in silver to one in gold, the true policy would be to sell the dead silver bullion in the Treasury at the market price. The Government would lose thereby, according to Secretary Carlisle's statement, ten millions, but this would not be nearly so much as European countries, especially Austria, have paid as a premium on gold purchased in this country for the purpose of replenishing their reserves. The sale of the silver bullion in Europe would at once bring home to England the importance of negotiations for fixing a new ratio between gold and silver.

Under our recent policy, which causes the accumulation of silver in the Treasury vaults, silver bullion has been virtually withdrawn from the markets of the world; that is to say, silver bullion produced in the United States. Upon the discontinuance of silver purchases by the United States Treasury, silver bullion would seek a market in Europe, and the finances of those countries would be brought face to face with the very question which the United States is now endeavoring to solve. If the Congress of the United States should decide upon the free coinage of silver upon the present basis of sixteen to one, this country would then be forced to the silver basis, and gold would become a commodity and be bought and sold in the market as such. All the business of the country would, therefore, at once be placed on a silver basis, while the business of England, France and Germany, with which Nations we have important commercial relations, would be on a gold basis. This would reduce the United States to a level with such countries as Mexico.

The people must choose between these conditions. They must decide upon the silver basis with the ratio of the two metals materially changed. If it should be decided to have an exclusive silver basis, then the policy would be to open the mints to the free coinage of silver upon the basis of sixteen to one. If, on the other hand, the parity of the two metals should be decided upon, then the true policy would be to stop the coinage of the silver dollar and the forced purchase of silver bullion. This would cost the Government, according to the statement of Mr. Carlisle, about ten millions of dollars, provided the sale of this bullion did not cause a further decline in the market. Even if this should occur, the Government could sustain the loss in view of the fact that the cornering of silver in this country would be stopped. The United States Government is now virtually protecting the Indian finances of Great Britain, and as a result our gold is going to Europe while our silver is lying useless in the Treasury. This is not a healthy condition viewed from either a commercial or financial standpoint.

It now remains for the Congress of the United States, which is soon to assemble, to adopt measures that will serve to protect the financial and commercial interests of this country.

HER OBJECT.

She talked about flirtation as a harmless Occupation, and the art of seduction As a most familiar thing;
And she said she saw no reason Why a maiden shouldn't "freeze on"
At the proper time each season To a sparkling diamond ring.

She spoke of slang as "taking";
And my finer feelings raking, Talked of man who "took the cake."
She believed, she said, in drinking, And accompanied this by winking,
And I could not keep from thinking What a dreadful wife she'd make.

Thus she gibbered without meaning, While I sat, my feelings screening And my cultured mind careening And my heart surcharged with woe.
While in language unexpected She talked on with me in dejection And I had I suspected
That she wanted me to go!

THE only thing the Editor ever found in his life—except toil and trouble—was a Beechtop. It was unearthed on Riverview Terrace yesterday and is pronounced by eminent authority to be a remarkably fine specimen. Its early history is somewhat obscure, —as the specimen itself had been for a few hundred centuries—but it is thought to have "lived and moved and had its being" some time previous to the era when Moses wrote the Pentateuch—perhaps several thousand years previous.

Colored School Closing.

Our school closes to-morrow with a picnic at the East end of the city. Everything has been arranged and we trust that the parents have made preparations for the day.

The pupils have had sufficient instructions as to the matter, but it may be that the public has not.

We are expecting the parents to co-operate with us in making the day one of pleasure.
Much will be added to the occasion to see a large number of them present. Things will be prepared so that the children may engage in various amusements. We want parent and child alike to have a time of general rejoicing.
The children will leave the Cox Building for the grounds at 10 o'clock on the street cars.
Lunch baskets will be prepared by the parents. Admission is free. All are welcome.
A short program will be rendered in the afternoon by representatives from different rooms, the primary playing the principal part.
We will be glad of your presence.

THOMAS L. ROUNT, Principal.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN.

DON'T BE TAKEN IN BY THE CIRCUS FOLLOWERS.

They Will Attempt the "Change Racket" and "Do" You if You Aren't Very Careful.

The circus is here.

And so is the gang of thieves that usually follow it.

The former is a big thing.

And so is the crowd of scoundrels.

THE LEDGER has advice that at every point where the circus has exhibited the "fakirs" have succeeded in fleecing unsuspecting people out of various sums of money by methods that rarely fail to catch the unwary.

This will be a good day to refuse change for $10 or $20 or $50 bills, unless you know your customer or you are a good judge of money.

It will be a good day, also, to look closely at all money that is offered you by strangers.

At Carlisle yesterday several persons were "buncoed" out of $10 by the "change racket," which appears to be a favorite scheme with these fellows.

It isn't the circus people themselves who engage in this business.

They are all right.

But it is the "fakirs" and "shell workers" who do the devilment.

Keep your eyes open.

And if any one attempts to do you up, Just press the button

And Chief Fitzgerald will do the rest!

Read It in His Paper.

People who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison of Bolan, Worth county, Ia., who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Ft. Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words, "It cured me right up." He also says: "A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me. He got a bottle and it cured them up in a week. I have great faith in Pain Balm and believe it will cure the worst cases of rheumatism. Fifty-cent bottles for sale by Power & Reynolds, druggists."

CARLISLE will hold her election for city officers to-morrow.

Mrs. ROBERT FICKLIN tendered a delightful reception to her many friends in this city last evening at her lovely home on East Third street. The gracious hostess was the recipient of profuse congratulations from her guests.

CAPITAL REMOVAL.

THE FIGHT IS NOW FAIRLY ON
AT FRANKFORT TOWN.

Lexington Seems to Have a Trifle the Best Show—The Speaker's Remarkable Ruling.

These are fateful times for Frankfort, and Wednesday was a great day in the House of Representatives.

Eighty-five members exercised their prerogatives, the largest attendance for many moons.
The Capital Removal Bill was called from the calendar, a special order for 10:30, and the fun commenced.

It was not fun for the Frankfort folks, however, many of whom sat with anxious faces drinking in every word that was said, and watching every move that was made.

A motion was made to extend the session, and it prevailed by a squeeze—37 to 36.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the session was extended was entered, but not acted upon, and this should be borne in mind in summing up a verdict upon the remarkable rulings at the close of affairs yesterday.

The original bill offered by Representative W. H. May, providing for the removal of the seat of Government to Lexington, was read a third time.

Mr. Myers of Covington offered a substitute, providing for removal, but leaving the location blank, to be filled in later, as the House might determine.

Mr. Pettit of Danville, whom it could be readily seen had been put forward as the champion of Frankfort interests, at once plunged into the arena and raised the standard upon a point of order, that the substitute must name a location, and that both the removal question and proposed new seat of Government must be voted upon at one and the same time.

The Speaker ruled that a substitute cannot be amended after adoption, that the blank must be filled and the substitute was out of order.

Mr. Myers at once forwarded an appeal in writing to the Clerk's desk, signed by himself and Mr. Carroll of Louisville.

The yeas and nays were called and the Speaker was overthrown by a vote of 50 to 34.
Mr. Hart of Fleming, a Frankfort Lieutenant, moved to fill the blank in Mr. Myers's substitute by inserting the word "Lexington," so as to test the strength of that city and knock her out on the first round if possible.

Mr. Myers now offered a resolution with the nominations of Louisville, Lexington, Frankfort, Danville and Bowling Green, and providing that balloting proceed and that the city receiving the lowest number of votes be dropped, and that the one remaining with the highest number of votes be declared the choice for the Capital location, and that the name thereof be entered in the blank space left for that purpose in Mr. Myers's substitute.

Mr. Pettit made the point of order that the resolution, under the rules, must go over one day, and the Speaker promptly sustained him.
Mr. Myers thereupon moved to go into the committee of the whole to avoid the rigidity of the rules and ruling, and consider the entire action. The roll was called and the House decided to go into committee of the whole by the decisive vote of 56 to 28, and the Frankfort leaders looked a little sick.

The Speaker called Mr. Banks, the member from Anderson, to the Chair and after coaching him into voice a bit, took a seat upon the "floor" with a show of fight on his face.

Mr. Myers offered his resolution to the committee.

Mr. Pettit renewed his point of order, asserting that the same rules that regulated proceedings in the House must prevail in the committee of the whole. Mr. Pettit further contended that the resolution was out of order for the reason that it provided for the location of the Capital at Frankfort, when it was already there.

Mr. Myers was accommodating and offered to amend his resolution by eliminating Frankfort so as to avoid the ruling of the Chair, which he knew would be adverse.

A spirited debate lasting over half an hour ensued.

The Chairman ruled the resolution out of order.

Mr. Myers appealed, but the Chair declared that he had never heard of such a thing as an appeal from the ruling of the Chair in a committee of the whole.

Speaker Moore then backed up his temporary Chairman.

Mr. Roberts of Scott read from the rules of the National House of Representatives, clearly demonstrating the right to appeal from the rulings of the Chairman of the committee of the whole, and Jefferson and other authorities were read in support of the appeal.

Czar Banks said it was now 1 o'clock, the regular hour for the House to adjourn, and notwithstanding no motion had been made in committee of the whole to rise and report progress, he vacated the Chair.

Speaker Moore resumed the throne, and, with a tremendous rap of his war club, adjourning the whole business. He said the motion to reconsider the vote by which the session had been extended canceled that action, although the motion to reconsider that subject had not yet been voted on.

The majority of the members were hot, but there was, of course, nothing to do but to vent their indignation in words impolite.

The fight is red hot from the jump.

Frankfort cannot count on the old rivalry and jealousy between Louisville and Lexington, and the harmony with which those cities moved off was alarming.

The Speaker's arbitrary rulings have hurt Frankfort's cause, and the opposition claim they have gained a half dozen votes thereby.
There will be much feeling manifested before the contest is over, and at present the prospects are that it will be long drawn out.
The indications point to removal, and Lexington seems to have the best of it.

Mrs. L. V. DAVIS, who has conducted the Millinery business in this city for the past twenty-five years, has only one store in Maysville and that is located in Zweigart's Block, into the right store.

A MISSING CONTRACTOR.

Unpaid Workmen Looking for Him at Washington City.

The Washington Post of June 13th relates the following event in the career of a former citizen of Maysville:

"Workmen under William January, the contractor for improvements to the roadbed of the Georgetown and Tenallytown Electric Railroad, are looking for him with considerable interest.

"On Saturday evening, May 27th, when the workmen assembled to get their wages, the contractor informed them that he could draw no money until the job was completed. There was a kick among the laborers, but they kept at work.

"The two succeeding Saturdays the same excuse was given the men. They objected so strongly that the contractor finally gave each man a few dollars, promising to pay in full when the work was completed.

"Monday morning, June 12th, the men were ready to go to work, but Mr. January did not appear. An inquiry revealed the fact that no later than Saturday the contractor drew $2,000 to pay his workmen."
